11. Each battalion has three companies, and each company has three platoons, each of which has a strength of 30-35 men. The weapons of these platoons are German repeating rifles, three to four automatic weapons in the possession of the non-commissioned officers, two heavy machine-guns [redacted] and two light machine-guns [redacted]. Each platoon also has a tall tripod on which is set a heavy machine-gun used as an anti-aircraft gun. Each platoon is composed of three squads, and each squad has a definite sector and duty.

50X1-HUM

12. All along the border, on every height at a distance of 100 meters apart, there are machine-gun nests. These are dugouts covered with a series of thick tree trunks on which dirt and a great heap of stones are piled; they have positions inside for light or heavy machine guns and an embrasure. There is room for two persons to move about inside; these machine-gun nests at present are empty. 50X1-HUM
13. In each platoon base there is a store with five or six boxes of cartridges. There are no mines in the store, and no mines have been laid.
14. The clothing and shoes of the army are of the poorest quality, and during the entire winter the soldiers were almost naked and half-naked. During [redacted] shoes were given [redacted] The situation of [redacted] brea which is given [redacted] or of such poor quality that it is not enough for the men. Generally, the army is disgusted with the regime, and disillusioned with living conditions and has no disposition for fighting. During the "enlightenment" meetings the usual cry is for demobilization, since they have had two or three years of service, and they know that their families are lacking everything.
15. The three bridges on the wagon road from Konispol to Delvine (Bougazi at Konispol, Hadja, and Krania at Bistrana) are made of wood and are guarded by squads of militia with a strength of six or eight men; there are no defense works (sic).
16. In the village of Hoxha, near the wagon road and at the edge of the bridge towards Delvine, a two-story building has been constructed (construction was completed in March 1949). The building is quite large and will be used as the office of the militia; that is, it will be the command post of the militia of the Konispol and eastern Vourko district. 50X1-HUM
